There are still several sites left for summer hotels in Vermont.

Readers will observe that a few members of the board of civil authority did not present appeals from their property appraisals.

We should like to hear, Governor Bell, about that "diseased meat" report which Attorney General Fitts turned over to you a week ago.

If it takes $20,000 in round figures to run for the governorship of Vermont, how much does it take to get there? We refer you to General Delivery, Proctor, Vt.

The Rutland Evening News shows signs of prosperity in the purchase of another linotype machine, and it promises even further changes. Congratulations are due.

There are thirty boys ready to sacrifice themselves for the good of the cause at Goddard seminary—they are candidates for the football team. And still we wonder what makes the rock-faced marker business so good?

A small volcano is in eruption in New Hampshire today. It is all due to the aspirations of five men to be the Republican nominee for governor of the Granite state. The candidates are Chas. H. Greenleaf of Franconia; Charles M. Pillsbury of Manchester; Rosecrans W. Flyburgh of Londonderry; Winston Churchill of Cornish; Stephen H. Gale of Exeter. The last named may be eliminated from the start, however, leaving the fight among the quartette. There has not been so much doubt over the result of the nomination during the past score of years, due to the conflicting claims of the four leading candidates, particularly Messrs. Greenleaf and Pillsbury. The Concord Monitor, which is supporting Greenleaf, foretold yesterday that whoever the candidate will be, his platform will be a progressive document, "looking toward essential and affirmative action on many questions which have hitherto been only dormant in our politics."

THE STONE DUST PROBLEM.

While agreeing heartily with the correspondent who writes in today's paper concerning the immediate need of fighting tuberculosis in Barre, The Times cannot concur in his statement that "altogether the lecture (by the state tuberculosis commission last winter) from the standpoint of a workingman was an entire failure." True, the speakers at this meeting did not take up that most crying need of Barre, the better ventilation of our granite sheds, but they did endeavor to impress upon the hearers the broad principle of personal care to prevent as much as possible the ravages of the disease. The state commission did not promise to clarify this problem of stone dust, the solution of which admittedly will tend to eradicate the disease in this city. It did not make pretension to do, without study, something which those men who have been brought in immediate touch with the danger have not been able to do. With all their acquaintance with tuberculosis, the state commission could not be expected to have the solution of the problem at their tongue's end, ready to enlighten us. If they had done so they would have needed some occult power.

What they did promise to do was to lay down some rules of personal care to loosen the grip of the dread disease. The cardinal principle laid down was the necessity for pure air. Now it may be paradoxical to tell a granite cutter to breathe pure air while at his work, and that is where Mr. Ironside undoubtedly finds much of his ground for declaring that the lecture was an "entire failure." Under present conditions, it is quite impossible for a worker in a granite shed to breathe pure air. Admitting that much, there are, however, sixteen other hours during his day in which it is possible for him to take as deep draughts of God's free, pure air as is allotted to anyone. Will he accept the opportunity? That is what the state tuberculosis commission endeavored to impress upon the people of Barre—pure air is life giving and it is free to any and all who will take it. On top of that, there is the sunshine which likewise is the property of us all in common. As to the matter of food, there is not, we dare say, a person in Barre who is not able to fortify himself against the ravages of the disease with nourishing food. If there be such, then the city government stands ready to assist in the work of mercy. These three principles, pure air, sunshine and nourishing food, the speakers at the lecture referred to endeavored to imprint upon the minds of all. To many it was unnecessary to say this, but to others it probably never occurred to use these simple remedies. To such as the latter, the lecture was designed. To the former it was simply repeating an old story. Yet we cannot say that the efforts of the commission were an entire failure, for very many men must have been taught to think of their personal conduct as a preventive of the disease. In saying this, The Times has not the purpose to minimize the necessity for a solution of the dust problem during the eight hours of the granite cutters' day. That is still left. What shall we do with it?

CABOT.

TENOR SOLO.

She who is dear to me
 Has wealth of grace,
 Fair as a nymph is she
 Decked in her lace;
 Curly that are kin to light,
 Lips of the rose;
 Gown of a fairy white,
 Blue silken bows.
 She who is dear to me
 Dances life through,
 Mocking at sorrow, she
 Throws back the rue.
 Light as the thistle-down,
 Sweet as the morn,
 Love in her eyes of brown
 Waits to be born.
 She who is dear to me
 Sings through the day,
 Thrills and arg is she
 Rhythmic her lay,
 What if her heart asleep
 Bounces not yet?
 My love so great and deep
 May not forget.
 One day her heart will wake,
 Give love its birth,
 Pour out its wealth, and make
 Heav'n of this earth.
